designed Plan for Battlefield Preservation Von Ein Kunde In recent years, our fascination with the Civil War has grown tremendously. Our concern with preserving the places where the Civil War was fought, however, has not kept pace. The Boges demonstrate very well the dangers that our Civil War battlefields face from uncontrolled, unthinking development. They also argue persuasively why we ought to protect these near-sacred places, for educational, historical, environmental and myriad other reasons. But, what sets this book apart is that the Boges actually present a plan for protecting our Civil War battlefields from the developer's earthmover. Their greatest contribution is that they show, through case studies and economic analysis, that development and saving battlefields are compatible. In fact, contrary to what developers would have us believe, saving battlefields can be a boon economically to the communities where the battlefields are located, let alone the benefit we all receive by preserving the battlefields. The Boges are not, however, Pollyannas seeking an end to all development. They are eminently realistic about the need for development, and this only makes their argument ever more persuasive. In addition, the maps, drawings and photographs in the book give real content to the threat facing our Civil War battlefields. What's more, there is a great foreword by James McPherson, author of Battle Cry of Freedom. One criticism I had was that the language the Boges used was, at times, melodramatic, although this clearly reflects the Boges' passion for the subject.

Kurzbeschreibung In this exhaustively researched book, Georgie Boge and Margie Boge analyze the issues and controversies surrounding the preservation of Civil War battlefield sites, and offer a pragmatic development program designed to accommodate the needs of both historic preservation and economic growth. Not only do they provide a framework for developing actual preservation strategies, they show how important historical, cultural, and natural resources can be preserved with economic benefit to the community. After exploring the special importance of battlefield sites to the nation, the Boges discuss existing policies for preservation. Through extensive case studies, they demonstrate the inadequacies of current mechanisms, and present a detailed policy program that could effectively protect the remaining land, and also help save other historically or culturally significant sites.

ber den Autor und weitere Mitwirkende Paving Over the Past began as a senior thesis at Princeton University, concerning the political battle that occurred in 1988 when the Manassas Battlefield was slated to be paved over. (The campaign of 1988 for battlefield preservation became known as "The 3rd Battle of Manassas" -- a play on words as "The 2nd Battle of Manassas" occurred in 1862 during the Civil War, and was where General Robert E. Lee's headquarters had been located.) Georgie Boge and Margie Holder Boge were students at Oxford and Princeton when they began this project.
