Carrel "The German Aces Speak I 2" are a must for all interested in the personalities of the German combat pilots who rose during WW II. The stories told by the concerned aces are giving a much more intimate picture of what were their feelings, especially towards their high Command (Hitler, Gring, Udet, von Greim, etc). One thing irritates me: I have read almost everything that has been written in english and german about this guys. Most of them tell they did know nothing about Shoah and concentration camps. Which is hard to believe especially from those who fought in the East and have no doubt seen thousands of almost dying slaves at work on their fields! But it is true that the German pilots had a greater sense for chivalry than their American fellows. For instance, firing at a guy hanging on his parachute was strictly forbidden. After reading these two books, I remain full of respect and admiration for Johannes Steinhoff, in my eyes the best fighter pilot of WW II, from a professional as well as a human point of view and for Hans-Joachim Marseille who refused the diamonds after he was informed about the concentration camps. Fernand Carrel

KurzbeschreibungThe much-anticipated sequel to The German Aces Speak gives voice to four more of WWII's most noteworthy German pilots.
